Pass the barrier and close it carefully after you. The path follows the long climb to the airfield (it looks like a large clearing).
2. Once at the top, go right for about 30 m, up to a wooden gate. Pass it and follow the path along the crest line (white and red markings). At the top, don't hesitate to sit on the bench to enjoy the landscape in front of you on the South side. You can see up to Mont Lozère which delineates the landscape. After an hour of walking, you will reach a little pass. Take the marked path on the left and start climbing, up to Gloria Friedman's work of art.
3. You can go in and enjoy the view from the only French lighthouse shared between the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea. After it, take the track going downhill.
4. At the crossways, turn right in the direction of "scierie de Masméjean 2.6 km, Le Bez 5.2 km. Follow the track in the woods.
5. At the crossways, turn right in the direction of "Le Bez, 2.6 km" (Yellow and white markings). First, the path is bordered by fields, then it follows the Masméjean Brook and goes again into the forest. Back to the crossways with the airfield path, turn left and go back to your starting point, the Le Bez pass.
