1. After a look at the Espissart waterfall (it runs only after rain), follow the road to the village.
2. At the crossroads, turn right towards "Antraïgues centre bourg". Head past the cemetery and the school on your left and go to the center of the village.
3. At the intersection, take the direction "place de la Résistance" on your right.
4. At the square, take the chemin de la Soie (silk path) that goes down immediately on your left and follow the calade (cobblestone path).
5. At the intersection, turn right (chemin des Muletiers). At the S bend, turn right on the calade. You are going out of the village to arrive at the Rocher du fromage that you can see below. At the foot of the rock, head past it and carry on straight ahead.
6. At the end of the road, turn left along a "béalière" (irrigation canal). Follow it, and then the columnar basalt above you on your left, up to the interpretive board explaining it. Follow this road up to the last columns.
7. Take the stairs up on your left. Follow the winding calade and, 50 m before reentering the village, take the stairs up on your right.
8. Once on the route des Allevards, turn left towards the village center, then immediately right (towards the city hall).
9. This time, while going down, take the stairs on your left, in front of the Espissart, where you will find an interpretive board, and go down to the parking lot, your starting point.
